Staff Spotlight:

Tyler Vogel

Extension Program Specialist

Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service

Institute for Infectious Animal Diseases (IIAD)

Vogel was born in Amarillo, Texas in 1989 and grew up in Canyon, TX. He pursued his Bachelor's degree in Animal Science, graduating from Texas Tech University in 2012. He later returned to Texas Tech and obtained his Master's of Science in Animal Science with a focus in Ruminant Nutrition in 2017.

In June 2018, Vogel joined the Veterinary Science Certificate Program (VSCP) through Texas A&M AgriLife Extension. Vogel represents Amarillo, Lubbock and Fort Stockton Districts in 4-H and Amarillo, Lubbock, West Texas, and East Texas areas in FFA as well as providing outreach services across the state of Texas and the United States. Prior to joining the VSCP team, Tyler worked in several Veterinary clinics in the Texas Panhandle as well as Animal Care Services during his time at Texas Tech University.

Tyler currently lives in Dimmitt, TX with his wife, five-month-old son, three dogs, and his three-legged cat. His hobbies include collecting sports memorabilia and baseball cards. Vogel enjoys traveling, golfing, spending time with his family, and watching movies.

Vogel is an avid sports enthusiast and can be found in his down time enjoying college or professional sporting events. He particularly loves watching the Atlanta Braves play baseball and any Texas Tech sports.
